

Thirty-Eighth Annual Donald C. Brace Memorial Lecture

MARK A. LEMLEY

WILLIAM H. NEUKOM PROFESSOR OF LAW
STANFORD UNIVERSITY LAW SCHOOL

Mark A. Lemley is the William H. Neukom Professor of Law at Stanford University Law School, the Director of the Stanford Program in Law, Science and Technology, and the Director of Stanford's LL.M. Program in Law, Science and Technology.

Professor Lemley teaches intellectual property, computer and Internet law, patent law, and antitrust. He is the author of seven books and more than 100 articles on these and related subjects, including the two-volume treatise IP and Antitrust. His works have been reprinted throughout the world and translated into Chinese, Japanese, Spanish, and Italian. He has testified frequently before Congress, the California legislature, the Federal Trade Commission, and the Antitrust Modernization Commission on patent, trade secret, antitrust and constitutional law matters, and has filed numerous amicus briefs before the U.S. Supreme Court, the California Supreme Court, and the federal circuit courts of appeals. He also has taught intellectual property law to federal and state judges at numerous Federal Judicial Center and ABA programs.

Professor Lemley has been named California Lawyer's Attorney of the Year (2005), a Young Global Leader by the Davos World Economic Forum (2007), one of the top 50 litigators in the country under 45 by the American Lawyer (2007), one of the 100 most influential lawyers in the nation by the National Law Journal (2006), one of the top intellectual property lawyers in California (2003, 2007, 2009) and one of the 100 most influential lawyers in California (2004, 2005, 2006, and 2008) by the [California] Daily Journal. In 2009 he received the California State Bar's inaugural IP Vanguard award. In 2002 he was chosen Boalt's Young Alumnus of the Year.

Professor Lemley is also a founding partner of Durie Tangri LLP. He litigates and counsels clients in all areas of intellectual property, antitrust, and Internet law. He has argued six federal appellate cases and numerous district court cases, and represented clients including Comcast, Genentech, Google, Grokster, Hummer Winblad, Impax, Intel, NetFlix, Palm, TiVo, and the University of Colorado Foundation.

After graduating from law school, Professor Lemley clerked for Judge Dorothy Nelson on the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit, and has practiced law in Silicon Valley with Brown & Bain and with Fish & Richardson and in San Francisco with Kecker & Van Nest. Until January 2000, he was the Marrs McLean Professor of Law at the University of Texas School of Law, and until June 2004 he was the Elizabeth Josslyn Boalt Professor of Law at the Boalt Hall School of Law, University of California at Berkeley.
